OEI turned on a new feature on the EPA web site that allows people to request information about a particular property. If our Facility Registry Service does not have any information about the specified address, people can print a certificate to that effect.

The importance is many FOIA requests received by the agency--perhaps as much as 40%--are asking for information about a particular property. These requests are often part of due diligence checks for real estate transactions. Providing a way for people to receive that information quickly via the web site can significantly reduce the number of FOIA requests the agency has to process.

Here's the web site: <https://www3.epa.gov/enviro/html/fii/myproperty/index.html>
